IPFW at a glance

Born separately, decades apart, and conjoined in 1964 along the banks of the St. Joseph River, Indiana University–Purdue University Fort Wayne offers an outstanding education at a great value. As northeastern Indiana’s premier public university, IPFW is committed to enhancing access to personalized, high-quality learning. The university offers more than 180 degree options for undergraduate and graduate programs, taught by distinguished professors. It’s not unusual to turn on a television documentary and see a member of IPFW’s faculty as the “resident expert” on topics ranging from dinosaurs to Middle East politics.

IPFW continues to grow, both in numbers of students and in facilities. Spring 2002 total student enrollment was 10,625, an 8 percent increase from spring 2001. The addition of more than a dozen new soccer fields across the St. Joseph River from the main campus has greatly increased athletic opportunities for students as well as for members of the community. Plans for a new music building are in the works, and fundraising efforts have already begun. IPFW opened student housing in 2004.

IPFW’s academic organization is made up of 10 major units, which include the schools of Business and Management Sciences; Education; Health Sciences; Arts and Sciences; Engineering, Technology, and Computer Science; and Visual and Performing Arts. It also includes the divisions of Continuing Studies, Labor Studies, Public and Environmental Affairs, and Organizational Leadership and Supervision.

There are dozens of student organizations on IPFW’s campus. Groups range from departmental organizations, honorary societies, religious organizations, social Greek fraternities and sororities, and special interest groups. There are also several intramural sports groups.

IPFW receives its accreditation from the Commission on Institutions of Higher Education of the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools.

History of Fort Wayne

Fort Wayne began as an outpost on the western frontier more than 200 years ago. It gained its nickname, the “Summit City,” by being the highest place between the Maumee and Wabash river basins.

Now with a population in excess of 200,000 people, it is the second largest city in Indiana. As such, it offers its citizenry a wide variety of things to do, see, and appreciate. For the sports minded, there are two professional sports teams based here: the United Hockey League’s Fort Wayne Komets and the Midwest League for Single A Baseball’s Fort Wayne Wizards, whose parent club is the San Diego Padres. Fort Wayne holds several places in sports history. It is the birthplace of the National Basketball Association and the home of the Daisy’s, one of five teams in the first professional women’s baseball league. Fort Wayne also has the honor of holding the first night baseball game under lights.

Fort those who are interested in the performing arts, the Summit City offers venues such as the Fort Wayne Philharmonic, Fort Wayne Ballet, the Civic Theatre, Artlink, Fort Wayne Dance Collective, and Fort Wayne Youth Theatres.

Some little known trivia about Fort Wayne: the inventor of the television Philo T. Farnsworth was born here, as was fashion designer Bill Blass. Fort Wayne is the home of the washing machine, baking powder, parking meters, magnetic wire, streetlights, and gas pumps.

Arenas
Outdoor Sports Complex
The outdoor sports complex is comprised of baseball, softball, and soccer fields. Teams compete on groomed and newly irrigated playing fields on the northeast side of campus across the street from the Gates Sports Center.

Tennis Courts
Built in 1999, the tennis teams play on six well-maintained and lighted tennis courts. The tennis courts are located just north of the outdoor sports complex. Hours for the tennis courts are from dawn to 11 p.m. The lights are activated with a geocentric timer so the lights come on at sunset or may be overridden by the physical plant or coach's key.

Hefner Fields
The IPFW Hefner Soccer Fields are made up of 14 full-sized soccer fields. Located across the river from IPFW on California Road, Hefner Soccer Fields host numerous state soccer tournaments as well as the IPFW Soccer Showcase. The fields are located west of the IPFW campus, across the St. Joe River. From US 30 East, the soccer fields are located just over the St. Joe Bridge behind Carrington Baseball Field. From US 30 West, Hefner Soccer Fields are located just before the St. Joe Bridge, immediately past Wizard's Baseball Stadium, behind Carrington Baseball Field.
